

The Greatest Nation on Earth

Arthur Barry

I used to be very offended by Americans who continually boasted about America as being the “greatest country on Earth”. Being an immigrant, I couldn’t believe that anyone could ever be so arrogant. Even if it was true, what kind of person went around bragging about it? Fifty years later it seems that we are more likely to hear Americans denigrating this country and, ironically, I get upset about that now. Even if America has problems, what kind of person goes around blaming America for all that is bad in the world?

Anyone who reads their Bible knows that there is a lot of discussion about nations in there. We see historic details about Babylonians and Assyrians. We learn about the rise and fall of nations like Egypt and Greece. We even encounter prophecies about nations such as Rome. The Bible is full of world conflicts with many victories and lots of defeats. Christianity was to be born amid the turmoil of a world that chafed against the rule of Rome, and Jesus Christ, the Son of God, came under the authority of Caesar. He was born in Bethlehem because Caesar Augustus ordered a census be taken (Luke 2:1-4). He died in Jerusalem when Pontius Pilate gave the final order for him to be crucified (John 19:16).

Those who put on Christ in baptism came from every nation under Heaven, but each one of them knew that they were being conscripted into the army of God. The Revelation presents a graphic depiction of the struggle between God’s people and the world, and it sounds a lot like the Old Testaments prophets who named nations and so often prophesied doom. Well, Almighty God is the One who raises up nations and the One who brings them down. Is there a nation that He prefers when all is said and done? If we asked Him which nation is the greatest nation on Earth, what would his answer be? After all, if there is to be such a claim, surely, we should have God’s word on that matter? Did God ever say that America is the greatest nation on Earth? Some say you can find that in the prophets, but it is not there. How about Rome in its day? Did He pronounce Rome the greatest nation, as it surely was at that time? Actually, He warned of Rome’s destruction.

So, we should be careful about proclaiming any nation to be the greatest nation on Earth. Nonetheless, I have a feeling that if we could ask God about that, and if He did give us an answer, the answer would have no nationality at all. Citizens of the Kingdom of Heaven come from all nations on Earth and He has said we are His Chosen Nation (1 Peter 2:9). We are more than conquerors (Romans 8:37). So, if I were to claim the church is the greatest nation on Earth, would I get an “AMEN!”?
